The new Government of Fiji seems to be slowly but surely gaining in strength, and in the confidence of the people; and although there appears to be occasional disturbances among the hill natives, and collisions between them and the Government forces, there is every reason to believe that the time is fast approaching when there will be no opposition from any portion of the people to the administration of the laws. As we have before stated, the principal obstacles met with at the formation of the Government, after the principal chiefs had given their adherence to it, were from a certain class of foreigners who, from a long habit of living free from the restraints of fixed laws, and probably also from a repugnance to being governed by laws enforced by the authority of native rulers, threw every possible obstruction in the way of the formation of the Government, short of open rebellion.

On the 22d of July, Maafu, the Viceroy, owing to the unavoidable absence of the King, reconvened the Parliament. The following is the King's Speech read on the occasion:

MR. SPEAKER AND HONORABLE GENTLEMEN OF THE ASSEMBLY.—"It affords me much pleasure to be able to release you from further attendance in Parliament after a session of such labor, which has manifested your public spirit and made large demands upon your attention and private interests. The important measures which have passed, and which are now in force, are the Bank Charter Act, the Customs Act, and the Polyvalent Immigration Act. During the earlier review I have no doubt that many of the members of the House will be able to adduce some additional reasons why it will be necessary to have a longer session. This is a matter of great interest to all, and I hope that the session will be a success."
